Brotherhood Crusade Honors SEIU President April Verrett at 2024 Pioneer of African American Achievement Award Dinner

SPECIAL TO THE SENTINEL

Leadership is Power and Brotherhood Crusade's 2024 Pioneer of African American Achievement Award Dinner was exactly that.

The room was filled with amazing and powerful leaders to acknowledge and support this year's honoree SEIU President April Ver-

As Charisse Bremond Weaver, president and CEO of the Brotherhood Crusade said, "April had an incredible journey, being raised by her grandmother who taught her perseverance, collective action and love for community."

Verrett received the Bremond/Bakewell award, which represents the pride, power, leadership and courage of individuals and organizations whose achievements and goals exemplify the spirit and strength of those who break down barriers, not for personal gain, but to provide a foothold for all to strive toward economic, social, political and moral justice.

The 1,000 guests, represented by corporate, foundation, city and state representatives, philanthropic entities and private citizens, filled the Fairmont Century Plaza ballroom.

Bremond Weaver stated, "We thank all of you for your support of the 3,000 students we serve and the 20,000 plus community members that we impact. Together we will continue this work and invest in our communities because everyone should have the opportunity to live with dignity, equity and care."

Brotherhood Crusade youth De'Ontay Everett was exemplary as he spoke about spaces being created for him to learn and grow.

In his speech that evening, he said, "Thank you for being a beacon of hope and for tirelessly pushing to ensure young people like me have a chance to succeed. You have shaped my journey, and I am proud to carry forward the legacy of the work of the Brotherhood Crusade."

"We are working to improve city services as we continue urgent preparations to host world events," Mayor Bass said during a press conference in Koreatown. "By focusing on and improving processes, the City delivered more services to Angelenos this year than the last two years."

Mayor Bass emphasized her administration's efforts to reduce homelessness through her Inside Safe initiative, which has already resulted in a 10% reduction in street homelessness. The initiative represents a significant shift in addressing the crisis, moving people off the streets and cutting red tape to build housing more efficiently.

"Our response is breaking with the old ways of doing things," said Bass. "We're seeing results—tens of thousands more {See MAYOR KAREN BASS on A-10}

Zawadi Cultural Collective and Black in the Valley Celebrate Kwanzaa and Community

By Dana Elaine Carroll Contributing Writer

The Zawadi Cultural Collective and Girl Scouts' Zawadi Troop 3246 presented Black in the Valley's Kwanzaa Marketplace and Celebration on Dec. 7, bringing the San Fernando Valley community together for a day filled with cultural pride, joy, and connection.

What began as an event for Zawadi Troop 3246, the largest Girl Scout troop in Los Angeles, has grown into a cherished tradition open to the public.

The celebration featured a robust schedule of activities, including line dancing, crafts for kids, and a special appearance by Santa, who

Social Justice Learning Institute Addresses Challenges Facing Communities of Color

By Joe W. Bowers Jr. California Black Media

The Social Justice Learning Institute (SJLI). based in Inglewood, is dedicated to addressing the challenges facing communities of color across Los County and Angeles beyond.

With a focus on education, health equity, and youth empowerment, SJLI runs impactful programs systemic tackle that inequalities and help build stronger communities. In addition to its work in Los Angeles, SJLI has expanded its efforts to Houston, Texas.

California Black Media (CBM) recently spoke with Derek Steele, SJLI's Executive Director. He discussed the organization's achievements, challenges, and future plans. Steele, a former engineer who transitioned into the field of health equity advocacy, has been at SJLI for more than a decade. His background in system-building and community organizing has shaped SJLI's approach to solving critical issues like How has SJLI's leadership and investments improved the lives of Black and Brown youth in L.A. County?

We must invest in both education and health. In addition to academic programs, SJLI has made a significant impact through our health equity initiasupport for students and their families.

What has been the most challenging aspect of SJLI's work in 2024?

While there was progress in 2020 and 2021 following the social justice movements, many of the commitments made during that time have since been

The challenge has been the full-throated walk back of a lot of those commitments.

What inspired SJLI to continue its mission despite the challenges of 2024?

SJLI's dedicated team and the support of the community have kept the organization moving forward. Our staff members have a deep commitment to the mission, and they are true believers in what we're trying to achieve. The involvement of the broader community has also helped. Community members come by on Fridays for our produce distribution, and some even join us at events like the equity

What is one lesson SJLI learned in 2024 that will shape its decisions in 2025?

One of the biggest lessons learned is the importance of building strong, aligned partnerships. SJLI has collaborated with the Brotherhood Crusade and BAM L.A. forming the Bloom Alliance—an initiative that stands for Building a clear plan in place allows the organization to stay adaptable when challenges arise. You have to plan the work and work the plan.

What is the biggest challenge facing Black and Brown communities in L.A. County in one word?

The biggest challenge is displacement. With rising housing costs, many families are being forced out of their neighborhoods, some leaving the state entirely or becoming homeless. More than 50% of people are housing burdened, spending over half of their income on housing. So, SJLI is working on Sankofa at Centinela, a 120-unit, 100% affordable housing development that will also house our new 25,000 square foot headquarters.

What was your most important achievement in 2024 and why?

The most important achievement was organizing our statewide professional development summit to mark the 70th anniversary of Brown v. Board of Education. We focused on research and strategies to improve education for African American and other students of color. Afterward, we partnered with the National Coalition of Educational Equity to host a convening in Washington D.C., continuing our efforts to drive progress.

What frustrated you the most over the last vear?

The ongoing inequities Black students face are the most frustrating. Despite our progress, challenges still exist.

What inspired you the most over the last year?

I was inspired by the collaboration and energy at our national conference in Washington D.C., where leaders from across the country united to focus on educational equity. Seeing so many passionate advocates gave me hope that real, lasting change is possible when we work together. What lesson did you learn in 2024 that will guide your decisions next

I learned the importance of collective action. Building coalitions of educators, lawmakers, and civil rights leaders is essential to addressing the root causes of inequity in our schools.

What is the biggest challenge Black Californians face in one word? Inequity.

What is your main goal for 2025?

My main goal is to speed up the implementation of evidence-based strategies that improve Black student achievement. Through partnerships, policy work, and professional development, I want to ensure our schools are equipped to meet the needs of Black students and help every learner succeed.

CLBC Celebrates Historic Milestone With Record Number of Women Members

By Antonio Ray Harvey California Black Media

The California Legislative Black Caucus (CLBC) made history on Dec. 2. For the first time, most of its members are women. Nine out of its 12 current members are Black women, the highest number in the organization's 57-year-history.

During the last legislative session, five out of 12 CLBC members were

For the 2025-26 Legislative session, three CLBC women members are serving in the State Senate and six in the State Assembly.

Sen. Laura Richardson (D-Inglewood) and Sen. Akilah Weber (D-LaMesa) were sworn in on the first official day of the 2025-26 Regular Session in the chambers of the State Senate by the Hon. Patricia Guerrero, Chief Justice of the California Supreme Court.

"Yesterday, I was sworn in as Senator of the 39th Senate District! I am so honored to do this work and excited to get started, Weber posted on her Facebook page Dec. 3. "I introduced my first bill on my first day, SB 32 to address maternity ward closures in the state. Let's go Senate District 39."

Before winning her Senate seat, Weber had served in the State Assembly for three years representing the 79th District in San Diego Coun-

She was also sworn in as Chair of the CLBC on Dec.

Weber and Richardson are joining CLBC member Sen. Lola Smallwood-Cuevas (D-Ladera Heights), who had previously been the only Black woman serving in the State Senate. Smallwood-Cuevas was elected in 2022

"This has been a long journey," said Smallwood-Cuevas. "We wouldn't be here if it wasn't for all of you coming together and standing up and supporting this effort to ensure that Black women have a voice here in Sacramento, representing the communities we all care about. We grew our caucus but this is just the beginning of making sure that the California State Legislature is representative of California."

New CLBC lawmakers in the Assembly — Assemblymembers Sade Elhawary (D-South Los Angeles), Rhodesia Ransom (D-LaShae Stockton) and (D-San Sharp-Collins Diego) — were also sworn in on Dec. 2 on the Assembly floor.

Elhawary, Ransom, and Sharp-Collins and are joining Richardson as the newest members of CLBC. However, Richardson previously served in the Assembly before being elected to Congress in 2007.

"There are some incredible people here who turned out the vote," said Richardson at a CLBC reception held to welcome new members. "Call me landslide Laura."

Richardson paid tribute to the icons in California politics who paved the way for her and other newly elected Black women.

"When I took my portrait, I wore a white turtleneck and a red jacket like Congresswoman Maxine Waters," added Richardson. All of us women are here because we stood on the backs and shoulders of women who served here capably and are respected and that has translated into giving us a chance."

Richardson acknowledged that there would be challenges ahead.

After her swearing in, Sharp-Collins said she is "honored and humbled to represent the people of the 79th Assembly District.

Returning CLBC members in the State Assembly are: immediate past CLBC Chair, Assemblymember Lori Wilson (D-Suisun City), and Assemblymembers Tina McKinnor (D-Inglewood), Mia Bonta (DAlameda), Issac Bryan (D-Ladera Heights), Corey Jackson (D-Moreno Valley)

Kevin McCarty (D-Sacramento), Chris Holden (DPasadena), and Reggie Jones-Sawyer (D-Los Angeles) also left.

McCarty did not seek reelection to the Assembly to run for mayor of Sacramento, a race he won. Holden and Jones-Sawyer were termed out.

The CLBC was established in 1967 by Black members of the California Legislature to address the concerns of African Americans and other citizens of color. Mervyn Dymally, who represented parts of greater Los Angeles in the Assembly and State Senate, led the founding. Dymally was also the 41st lieutenant lawmakers, almost half of its 120 total members.

"We couldn't be more excited about this outstanding group of new Senators who were sworn in today," said Senate Pro Tem McGuire (DHealdsburg), who led the convening session that officially began the upcoming two-year legislative session.

"They're hard-working, innovative, and ready to tackle the tough challenges ahead," McGuire added. Later that evening, the CLBC held a reception to welcome its new leadership and members. Weber and Bryan were elected by the CLBC in August to serve as its next Chair and Vice Chair, respectively.

The new members of the CLBC say there are inspired, motivated and ready to start working on behalf of their constituents.

"I'm deeply grateful for the opportunity to continue my work to provide economic opportunity for all, reduce costs, strengthen accountability and education, and protect our neighborhoods. I'm ready to get to work and deliver results, she added."

On her first day, Elhawary, who is the daughter of Egyptian and Guatemalan immigrants, introduced her first piece of legislation, Assembly Bill (AB) 37, which proposes solutions to improve mental health services for our unhoused neighbors, especially schoolkids and their families.

"My goal with this bill is to organize all interested parties in a discussion with a goal to aggressively research the hurdles we still face and identify policy or regulatory solutions in providing this essential service," Elhawary stated.

Sharp Collins stated. "I look forward to working with my colleagues and our Assembly leadership to better the 79th District and the State as a whole."

"There is so much work to be done," she said.

Frontline Doulas Bring Equitable Birthing Services Black and Indigenous Families

California Black Media

Frontline Doulas provides African American families in Los Angeles County nonmedical professional perinatal services at no cost.

This includes physical, emotional, informational, psychosocial and advocacy support during the pregnancy, childbirth and postpartum period. Women of all ages — with all forms of insurance — are accepted and encouraged to apply for services.

Given that communitybased doulas focus on marginalized patients and underserved families, they are more likely to support clients challenged by institutionalized racism and cultural incompetence within the medical setting.

While serving past birthing clients in extreme situations, Frontline's team of doulas strive to act with strength and compassion like soldiers on the frontline of battle. For this reason, supervisors and mentors Dr. Sayida Peprah and Khefri Riley affectionately gave them the name "The Frontline Doulas."

California Black Media (CBM) spoke with cofounder Khefri Riley. She reflected on Frontline's accomplishments this year and the organization's goals moving forward.

Indigenous birthing fami-

How did your leadership and investments contribute to improving the lives of Black Californians?

We believe that the revolution begins in the womb. What we mean by that is we have the potentiality and the ability to create intentional generational healing from the moment before a child was conceived, when a child was conceived, during this gestational time and when a child is born.

And there's a traditional saying in indigenous communities where what we do now affects future generations going forward. So, the work that we do with birthing families, in particular Black birthing families, is to create powerful and healthy outcomes for the new generation so that we don't have to replicate pain, fear, discrimination, or racism. We can replicate joy and happiness and truth and collective liberation, and we can do that in birth. That's where it starts.

What frustrated you the most over the last

Working in reproductive justice often creates a heavy burden on the organization and the caregivers that deliver the services most needed to the communities. So, oftentimes, we're advocating for those whose voices are silenced and erased, and you really have to be a warrior to stand strong and firm. Our dedication to our communities can sometimes be tiring — repeating the same thing over and over. But you know the statistics, the dire outcomes, can take a lot out of you.

My great-grandmother. My father was his grandmother's midwife assistant when he was a young boy. I grew up with their medicine stories — the ways that they healed the community and were present to the community, even amidst Jim Crow. I find that you have to really reach for your highest vision, and you have to stand firm in your value.

The value you have as a sovereign self, the value that you have as a human being. And the value that we have in community and the value that we have in collective liberation. Because oftentimes, when we're talking largescale systems, government, healthcare, politics, they're not necessarily going to look out for you. What is the goal you want to achieve most in 2025?

I really would like to see a reduction in infant mortality and maternal mortality within our communities and witness this new birth worker force be supported and integrated into systems. So, that way, we fulfill our goal of healthy, unlimited birth in the Black community, and indeed in all birthing communities in Los Angeles and California.

How to Improve Family Health Throughout the Year

California Respects the Power of Your Vote

Dr. Shirley Weber

BY SHIRLEY N. WEBER, PH.D. California Secretary of State

Californians can confidently claim this: California has made more significant reforms to our election laws and expanded voting rights than any other state.

The relevance of this accomplishment deepens as we prepare to celebrate the 60th anniversary of the Voting Rights Act next year. This landmark legislation began to undo our country's long history of voter suppression, intimidation, and disenfranchisement that far too many Americans experienced at the polls for decades.

My own parents, who were sharecroppers, were denied their right to vote in the Jim Crow era South. Before moving to Los Angeles from Hope, Arkansas, my parents, David and Mildred Nash, could not vote. My father was an adult with six children before he registered to vote and was only able to exercise that constitutional right for the first time here in California.

As California Secretary of State, I do not take the progress we have made over the years lightly. My staff and I hold sacred the obligation to ensure that our elections are safe, free, fair, and accessible to all. Therefore, before certifying the results for this year's election on Dec. 13, we have taken a number of steps to ensure that every vote is counted. We have also made sure that our ballot counting process is credible and free from interference.

To meet that deadline without a hitch, California requires elections officials in all 58 counties to turn in their official results by a certain date. This year, that date

By law, every eligible voter in our state receives a vote-bymail ballot. This ensures all registered voters can exercise their right to vote.

Whether you placed your ballot in a designated drop-off box, voted by mail, or cast your ballot at a polling center, votes are safe and secure. And we allow voters to sign up to receive text message, email, or voice call notifications about the status of their own ballots by using the Where's My Ballot? tool. To learn more or to sign up, paste this URL in your web browser: https://california.ballottrax.net/voter/

The ballots of Californians who voted by mail are also protected. The United States Postal Service partners with the State to make sure ballots are delivered on time. All mailed-in ballots are sent by First Class mail with a postage paid envelope provided to every eligible registered voter.

Election Security is our number one priority. That's why my office designed and implemented a program to back up that commitment. For more information, visit this URL: https://www.sos.ca.gov/elections/election-cybersecurity

Additionally, California takes preventive actions to make sure our voting technology keeps our elections safe and protects everyone's votes.

For example, county voting systems are not connected to the internet, which protects them from cyberthreats. The State also performs regular and rigorous testing to make sure the voting systems are working optimally, and only authorized personnel are granted access.

Staff members are also given phishing and cybersecurity training.

VoteCal, the state's centralized voter registration system, is also key. The system is regularly updated, and it is used as a resource for counties to verify voter signa-

California also provides security at all counting locations and makes sure ballot drop-off boxes are secured and monitored.

And all election processes are open to observation during specified hours. In my role as Secretary of State of California, there is nothing more important to me than defending our democracy. I am committed to safeguarding voting rights, and to leading our state in upholding the highest democratic standards by implementing policies and practices that Californians and all Americans can trust and

Black Culture Activity Boxes For Kids In Time For Holidays

Black Studies professor and Tech Founder moms collaborate on Thrive Culture Box Solution

SENTINEL NEWS SERVICE

Is there a better gift than Black culture? This holiday season you can give children ages four and over the gift of learning more about Black Culture. Two Los Angeles based moms, Dr. Anndretta Lyle and Stacy Kirk, who are experts in cultural education and technology respectively, have come together with a solution called Thrive Culture Box.

Children and families can celebrate Black culture and how to uplift our communities together in an exciting new way. Family members, caregivers, and friends who purchase the subscription service at www.ThriveCultureBox.co m will get a new activity box delivered every month with corresponding instructional videos and lessons.

Describing the first box from the Black inventors debut series, Kirk said, "This one is so thrilling it's all about Black inventors who shaped history. Each month, kids dive into a fun and interactive online course with physical course tools and games featuring groundbreaking Black inventors, from the genius behind the most effective traffic light to pioneers in medicine and technology. Did you know that a Black inventor perfected the formula for ice cream?"

This new offering combines the best of tech, the best of education, and the best of Black culture. Dr. Lyle noted, "We are not only teaching history— we are working with families to spark innovation and confidence in the next generation. And as both a parent and an educator I wanted children to have more than just videos and digital learning. With Thrive Culture Box kids get to use their hands and exercise creativity with physical materials as well.'

Lyle had spent almost a decade teaching Black Studies and Performance Studies to college students in Los Angeles and the Bay Area. She taught at UCLA, USC, and CSU East Bay. Across all of those campuses and demographics her students often had the same question - "Why wasn't I taught this sooner?"

There was some promising movement happening around the California Ethnic Studies requirement, but ultimately that would only include high school students. Lyle started developing a solution for young Black learners and their families. In 2019, with a small

The summer camp takes place in View Park and families have come from as far as Nevada to participate. While continuing the camp (now accepting 2025 registration), this demand helped Dr. Lyle to understand that our communities need a more scalable solution.

Kirk then brought the momentum and drive of tech entrepreneurship to move things along more quickly. Kirk is an entrepreneur, business strategist,

Anwar Ali: The Actor and Digital Archivist of Black Hollywood

By Nathan J. Lee Contributing Writer

In 2005, Oneworld Publications released bestselling author Donald Bogle's "Bright Boulevards, Bold Dreams: The Story of Black Hollywood" to great acclaim. Entertainment Weekly described it as "shameful, funny, enlightening, and sobering."

Today, Anwar Ali carries that same torch of storytelling into the digital age. As a modern archivist of Black Hollywood, Anwar captures the richness and fascination of untold narratives of Black culture and converts them into viral social media moments on TikTok and Instagram. As an actor and orator, he documents the legacy of Black Hollywood to ensure it is preserved and celebrated.

Anwar Ali's journey into social media began with a quest for footing in a space he was not entirely sure how to navigate. Initially, he created videos centered around spiritual topics like alignment and timing. While the content performed adequately, it lacked personal resonance.

The turning point came when he encountered a TikTok video of a woman humorously critiquing the casting trends in Black sit-

"If you cast a black sitcom, the daughter is always going to be Yara Shahidi, which I was like, no, that's not true, but I know what you what you're trying to say," he recalled.

Disagreeing with her claim but understanding her perspective, Anwar responded with his own video, offering a sharp observation about colorism and representation in Black television. That video went viral, marking a pivotal moment in his creative path. Encouraged by the response, he began engaging with comments and expanding his content. From unpacking the "Friends" versus "Living Single" debate to uncovering forgotten Black sitcoms and spotlighting Black actors in short-lived shows or films, Anwar discovered his niche: celebrating the often-overlooked stories of Black Hollywood.

At his core, Anwar is an actor first. Even in his content creation and videos, his work is infused with performance. "I'm not just spewing information or reading off IMDb," he explains. "For me, it's about creating a performance." Whether on screen or in his viral social media content, Anwar approaches every project with the soul of an actor, using his craft to captivate and connect with his audience. Ali's passion for acting and film began at an early age; however, he kept his love for the arts to himself. "Nobody at school knew anything about my interest in film and television," he recalls.

Growing up in a community with no school plays or arts programs, Anwar had few opportunities to nurture his creativity. In community college he found an outlet, enrolling in a film and TV class. There, an unexpected opportunity came his way when he stepped in for an absent actor, marking the beginning of his journey into performance.

The following semester he enrolled in acting and speech class. Ali started taking classes around Chicago and enrolled in Aurora University, a small local university, where he performed in his first play, "Trojan Women," in 2013. "I didn't have any lines. I played a soldier," he shares While at Aurora University, Anwar Ali attended the Williamstown Theatre Festival in 2015, a key experience that set the stage for his future. After graduating in 2016, he joined Brown University's prestigious MFA program in fall 2017.

Eventually, his hard work led him to Los Angeles, where he began auditioning and making strides in television, the medium he had always dreamed of. "When they say it takes ten years, they never tell you when it starts. But that ten years began when I decided that it started, [and] this is what I want to do," he reflects.

Now, the seeds Ali planted years ago are finally bearing fruit, and his career is aligning in ways he had always envi-

"Seeds were planted, and now there's growth," he remarks, his passion and persistence evident at every step.

Like the stories he tells, Anwar's journey is a bold narrative of dreams realized against the bright lights and boulevards of Black Hollywood.

Nikki Giovanni, Poet And Literary Celebrity, Passes at 81

By HILLEL ITALIE Associated Press

Nikki Giovanni, the poet, author, educator and public speaker who went from borrowing money to release her first book to spending decades as a literary celebrity who shared blunt and conversational takes on everything from racism and love to space travel and mortality, has died. She was 81.

Giovanni, subject of the prize-winning 2023 documentary "Going to Mars," died Monday, Dec. 9, with her lifelong partner, Virginia "Ginney" Fowler, by her side, according to a statement from friend and author Renée Watson.

"We will forever feel blessed to have shared a legacy and love with our dear cousin," said Allison (Pat) Ragan, Giovanni's cousin, in a statement on behalf of the family. Giovanni also had a son. Thomas Watson Giovanni.

The author of more than 25 books, Giovanni was a born confessor and performer whom fans came to know well from her work, readings and other live appearances and her years on the faculty of Virginia Tech, among other copies, led to invitations from "The Tonight Show" and other television programs and made her popular enough to fill a 3,000seat concert hall at Lincoln Center for a celebration of her 30th birthday.

For a time, she was called "The Princess of Black Poetry."

"All I know is she is the most cowardly, bravest, least understanding, most sensitive, slowest to anger, most quixotic, lyingest, most honest woman I know," her friend Barbara Crosby wrote in the introduction to "The Prosaic Soul of Nikki Giovanni," an anthology of nonfiction prose published in 2003.

Giovanni's admirers ranged from James Baldwin to Teena Marie, who name-checked her on the dance hit "Square Biz," to Oprah Winfrey, who invited the poet to her "Living Legends" summit in 2005, when other guests of honor included Rosa Parks and Toni Morrison. Giovanni was a National Book Award finalist in 1973 for a prose work about her life, "Gemini." She also received a Grammy nomination for the spoken word album "The Nikki Giovanni Poetry Collection."

Under Mayor Bass's leadership, Los Angeles has seen a decline in homicides and a surge in LAPD applicants. Her Office of Community Safety is also charting new ground by focusing on innovative, community-centered safety measures.

"We've taken urgent action to make the streets safer for children and families getting to and from school by deploying a record number of crossing guards, installing more than 250 speed bumps, and establishing 450 school slow zones," Bass noted.

Mayor Bass highlighted her work to support local businesses and boost economic activity in Black neighborhoods.

In addition, her administration has focused on creating jobs and improving public transportation, with Metro ridership increasing every month since she took

"Metro crossed more than one million daily riders this year," she said. "This shows we're building a transit infrastructure for the future of Los Angeles."

Ahead of the 2026 FIFA World Cup and 2028 Olympics, Mayor Bass signed Executive Directive 9 to streamline infrastructure projects and ensure the city is ready for the global spotlight.

"Today, we recognize progress made and the urgent work before us," said Vahid Khorsand, a member of the Board of Public Works. "The mayor has given us the green light, and we are up to the task of delivering world-class services for a world-class city."

Mayor Bass also underscored the importance of inclusivity in her administration's work.

"We want to make sure that when the world comes to L.A., they see a clean city but also experience all of L.A.'s diversity and neighborhoods," she said.

Her efforts include expanding access to green spaces and addressing environmental justice, with over 200 solar streetlights installed in neighborhoods like the San Fernando Vallev to enhance safety.

While Mayor Bass continues her work to transform Los Angeles, she is focused on making the city more livable, equitable, and inclusive.

"We are making Los Angeles more livable, and that urgent action will continue into the new year," she said.

With her administration's progress, Mayor Bass is not just preparing Los Angeles for global events but also ensuring that local communities, including Black Angelenos, see the benefits of a city moving in a new direction.

Homeless and Their Advocates Speak Out in New Film, 'WE, the Vulnerable of LA' poet of 2024.

Men and women struggling for survival beneath the city's wealthy high-rises and skyscrapers shed light on challenges faced by the homeless community in a new film, "WE, the Vulnerable of L.A.," directed by Michael Henry, after panel discussion about "WE, the Vulnerable of LA" documentary film screening at Charles Drew University.

Diego Sapienza.

Screened Dec. 4 at the Keck Auditorium at Charles R. Drew University of Medicine and Science in South L.A., the film depicts those struggling on the streets, gave firsthand accounts. The idea is to show local politicians and those empowered to help the homeless community what is undeniable, said producer Francisco Pérez.

According to the 2024 Los Angeles Homeless Count, an estimated 75,312 people were experiencing homelessness on any given night in Los Angeles County this year.

Among them is Michael Henry, 24, who is featured in the film. He manages to make his way, but needs housing, mental health therapy, food, and job placement. He is shown doing small 'donuts' or circles on his mini-bike in front of Granada on Broadway, the outreach center where he has volunteered for the last three years. The center offers support groups for dependency issues and programs such as rehabilitation outreach, HIV testing, counseling, support groups, and health fairs.

"A lot of the jobs I apply for, they tell me, 'Oh, you're not fit for this job or you don't have the experience or we're not looking,' but the whole time they say they're not looking, they're hiring a different person," stated Henry. He does "handy work, and does all types of things," he said. "I build different things, cut grass, paint, all just to survive."

Another participant in the film is Melisa Haynes, who is crying when first enters the frame. "Angry. Lost. Fears loneliness. Alone," she stated. Melisa stated that she felt as though no one cares much, and she doesn't talk to her family much. She did not go into why, but she spoke about the need to feel secure and safe, which she often does not.

Occasionally, fights break out in places where she's been sheltered, which has led to write-ups and evictions. "And where do you go from there? Do they just put you out on the street or do they help you get into another shelter," she questioned.

Lisa Smith, who said her community is a safe area, "if you mind your business" said she had to ensure a lot just to even go to a shelter. "I like doing me and I don't like taking instructions from others, because I'm a mother and I don't like being bossed," she said. She explained that she loves long walks and reminisced of when she once lived in a house and worked at Charles Drew and King Hospital. But she drugs after a failed marriage, she said.

Too often, many are forced to choose between immediate needs and lifesaving surgeries. They go for the immediate hunger, shelter, depression - and inability to address the other issues leads to alcohol and substance abuse, said

Perez, during the film. "The problem is getting bigger and bigger and bigger and the same people get funding, and not necessarily the ones that are making a difference," said Pérez, who has worked with the homeless crisis for 30 years. "We still have the same problems, yet the funding is not coming to South Central, small agencies," he argued.

"For us, it's bringing the actual resources, bringing TAP cards (for public transportation) outside, shoes, donations, food, bringing the actual 'I needs', it's a tangible thing," stated film participant, Ana Moncada, executive director of HealthCare Advanced Administration.

"People in this community, based upon the Violence Statistics Report, have some of the highest morbidity mortality for all of the major health indicators, such as heart disease, lung disease, cancer, hypertension, high rates of STI (sexually transmitted infections), and substance use," stated Cynthia Davis, MPH, Assistant Professor in the College of Medicine and College of Science and Health at Drew University.

In addition to food insecurity issues and the scarcity of grocery stores with fresh produce and foods, the area suffers with a substandard educational system. "You have young people in this community who have graduated from high school who can't read," said Davis, who is also Domestic Vice Chair of AIDS Healthcare Foundation's Board of Directors.

"It's just a reflection, a mirror, of what's happening in the major cities across this county in terms of Black and Brown people and them trying to survive in a society that's based on structural and institutionalized racism," added Davis. Granada on Broadway Outreach Center recommends, including vulnerable members of the community in decision-making, educating the public about the needs of the homeless population to decrease stigma, increase funding for small agencies to address immediate needs of the vulnerable, and expanding university programs to offer free dental services in those communities.

Henry is seen in the film's conclusion, sitting on his mini-bike, overlooking tracks as a railroad passes by, though he said he feels invisible, like a ghost as people just walk past him. He desires more programs that would enable him to live like a regular human being.

"Right now, I feel like an animal, a person that just don't have a life, like I don't matter. But I want to feel like someone that matters. I want to feel important,' he said on screen.

What would help him feel seen is basically what anyone else would want, he elaborated during the panel discussion.

"Don't judge me. Everybody judges people because of their appearance, but when you judge somebody you're not just judging that person. You're also judging yourself," said Henry, who views people like that as hypocrites.

"Why judge me when you can just help me to be the better person that I want to be? Instead of putting me down, lift me up," he said.

ual's overall well-being. This cookbook is a tremendous resource to help people incorporate more healthy food into their diet," said Kristen Cerf, president and CEO of Blue Shield of California Promise Health Plan.

Recognizing the importance of nutrition, "food is medicine" programs have become increasingly popular in the healthcare industry. Blue Shield Promise sees this cookbook as an opportunity to provide members and the broader community with a variety of high-quality recipes.

Over the next several months, Blue Shield Promise will promote and distribute thousands of cookbooks. Recipes from the cookbook will also be incorporated into community health and education programming in Southern California.

Blue Shield Promise is collaborating with local organizations like Olivewood Gardens and Learning Center, a nonprofit educational garden that serves as a resource for health education, environmental stewardship and community connection.

Olivewood Gardens' Kitchenistas® — leaders in the community committed to teaching their peers about healthy lifestyles helped field-test recipes from the cookbook and will offer classes to ensure community members have the tools they need to make healthy meals.

"Healthy cooking has been a passion of mine for as long as I can remember, and it goes hand-in-hand with my commitment to give back to my communisaid Kitchenista Rosamaria Barrientos.

"This cookbook will be an important tool to help families make nutritious meals, and I look forward to sharing these recipes with my friends and neighbors." Read more from Blue Shield Promise and learn more about the Kitchenistas and other community leaders promoting health on the Thrive Global Cooking With Purpose web page.

The Thrive Global Foundation will also be teaming up with the global product design and technology company SharkNinja, which will be donating 500 kitchen appliances including blenders, food processors and cookware.

Through collaboration community-based organizations, the Thrive Global Foundation will distribute these tools to empower individuals and families to prepare nutritious, affordable meals, making healthy eating more accessible.

"At SharkNinja, we are driven by our mission to positively impact people's lives around the world with problem-solving innovation and that commitment extends to our communities," said Mark Barrocas, CEO of SharkNinja.

"Our partnership with the Thrive Global Foundation allows us to help foster well-being and resilience in people's lives, especially those in need. By providing products that help people live healthier, happier lives and investing in programs that empower individuals to thrive, we hope to create a powerful ripple effect that strengthens families and communities."

The Thrive Global Cookbook is available now to download for free in English and Spanish, and nine additional languages early next year.

Holiday Gift Guide 2024: Empowering Communities Through African American and BIPOC-Owned Businesses

By Magrira Contributing Writer

Our economic power is undeniable, and recognizing it is the first step toward making informed, impactful decisions — particularly as the holiday season approaches. It's not complicated: if we, as consumers, aren't valued, then neither is our money.

The collective purchasing power of African American consumers is growing exponentially, from approximately $910 billion in 2019 to an estimated $1.7 trillion by 2030. This remarkable economic influence is a powerful tool that we must use to shape our communities and the businesses we support.

With this remarkable economic influence comes a vital responsibility: to make purchasing choices that reflect our values, uplift our communities, and honor our culture. Now more than ever, the call to "Buy African American" and support BIPOC businesses is essen-

Guess Who's Running for President of the Baptist Minister's Conference?

The Rev. Donald L Wilson believes he has what it takes to lead the conference.

By Brian W. Carter Contributing Writer

Reverend Donald L. Wilson, associate minister of Pleasant Hill Baptist Church, is ready to do God's work as the new president of the Baptist Minister's Conference.

"My goal is to seek the presidency of the Baptist Ministers Conference to serve as a guiding light in community beyond," stated Wilson.

He's originally from Galveston, Texas, but was raised here in Los Angeles. Wilson is a product of the Los Angeles Unified School District having attended Queen Ann Elementary School, Foshay Junior High School and Los Angeles High School.

He attended Los Angeles Trade Technical College, receiving a certificate of completion in chef training and earned a Bachelor of Theology Degree from the Joint Baptist Theological Seminary.

He has been preaching for 40 years having pastored at True Way Missionary Baptist Church in South L.A. for 10 of those years. He got called into ministry in the early 80s and began preaching the Word of God.

"A revelation about inspirational messages is what I was receiving," said Wilson about his call to ministry. "I was a layman in the church, but I was not convinced until the second message that God gave Brent, Sr. He was introduced to the Baptist Minister's Conference by Dr. Brent, Sr. He is currently serving under the spiritual leadership of Bishop Sylvester Washington, pastor of the Pleasant Hill Baptist Church. Wilson is married to Elvia Wilson, a father of two children and three grandchildren.

Preachers are always a popular topic of conversation for either positive or negative reasons. Wilson shared that there is a continuous present-day misconception many have about preachers.

"People cannot forget we are human beings as well," said Wilson. "I don't care how well we can preach, how talented we may be, we're still subject to a banana peel or to slip on some black ice that you can't even see.

"Scripture says, 'let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall,' so we need to brace ourselves as we minister to people because 'But by the grace of God' there go I.

"It's a privilege to be called to preach because it is the highest calling in the

When asked where he sees the body of Christ, the church. Wilson shared that there is still much to be done.

"We're in a critical stage because if you look at the climate, we still see people dying and going to hell," said Wilson, "We've got to continue to mandate 'go ye therefore' and preach the gospel and baptize in the name of Jesus."

Wilson continued, "The more folks get saved, the better off our community would be. The Bible said the harvest is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Everyday, God is directing a Christian, on an individual basis, to witness to somebody.

"That is still at hand today and we cannot cease to rest from that until God calls us home."

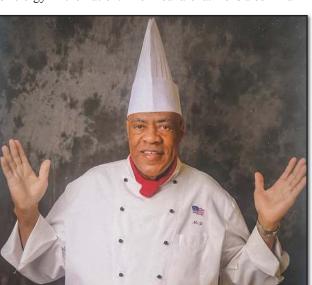

Wilson believes that true witnessing first starts with one's conduct in their daily life. He preaches that it is important for Christians to live an upright life because they maybe the only "Bible" anyone ever knows.

"None of us are perfect, but we should be headed for perfection," said Wilson. "Those people, who are not saved, the most Bible that they're going to ever read is your life.

"It's not what you sayit's what you do, so we have a huge responsibility to let our light so shine."

Magic Johnson Foundation and Target Bring Holiday Joy to

Los Angeles Communities

By Nathan J. Lee Contributing Writer

The Magic Johnson Foundation, in partnership with Target, brought holiday cheer to Los Angeles by hosting a special event on Dec. 7, at the Target store located at 3535 S. La Cienega Blvd.

The event treated 125 under-resourced children to a VIP shopping spree, with each child receiving up to $150 to select items of their choice. Led by Earvin "Magic" Johnson, the initiative spread festive joy and alleviated financial stress for families during the holiday season.

"This is probably my favorite event," Magic Johnson remarked, reflecting on the joy of seeing

DR. MAULANA KARENGA

Concerning Kwanzaa, Race and Religion: Particular, Universal and Common Ground

This is a revisiting of an early and ongoing conversation about the shared meaning of Kwanzaa, its particular cultural message to African people, and its core values that speak to the best of what it means to be African and human in the world and for the world. It raises the constantly relevant issues of race and religion and how they relate, not only to Kwanzaa as a holiday, but also to us as a people.

Each year the coming of Kwanzaa brings a sense of joyful satisfaction of having created something unique, beautiful, and beneficial for our people. It also reminds me of the extensive and enjoyable research, study and thought I pursued to conceive and create Kwanzaa, and the overall and ongoing labor of love offered to make Kwanzaa a living, lasting and transformative tradition worthy of the name, history, and culture African.

As an activist-scholar, I sought to build into Kwanzaa's Kawaida philosophical framework answers to questions that would be raised, not only about the daily practice and values of Kwanzaa, but also about its origins and intent, its relation to religious and other holidays, and our self-conscious insistence on the special and particular meaning and message it has for us as African people.

I think too of how millions of African people all world have over the embraced and celebrate this pan-African holiday, Kwanzaa, and how Kwanzaa unites us in ways no other holiday does. And I think of how it reaffirms our identity, dignity and excellence as African people, grounds us in our culture and provides us with a value system in the Nguzo Saba (The Seven Principles) which serves as framework and foundation for our internal strengthening and flourishing and our bringing good into the world.

Umoja These are (Unity), Kujichagulia (Self-Determination), Ujima (Collective Work and Responsibility), Ujamaa (Cooperative Economics), Nia (Purpose), Kuumba (Creativity), and Imani (Faith).

Given the phenomenal growth and solid grounding Kwanzaa has achieved in the world African community, it's no wonder claimants and controversies rise around it. Indeed, if it had remained a small organizational holiday as in its first years, no one would think it worthy of either claim or comment. For success always has numerous fraudulent fathers and pretentious mothers, but failure is almost always an orphan.

Thus, there is an increasing parade of pretentious contributors to Kwanzaa's conception, revisionist "histories" claiming discoveries of new authors and collective origins of its creation, and a persistent stream of right-wing, left-wing and liberal criticism around contrived issues of race and reli-

The first problem of quaint and curious claims of creating Kwanzaa is easily solved by testing the claimants for evidence of competence in African cultures and languages relevant to the conception of Kwanzaa, for indications of relevant research and associated intellectual activity, and for demonstration of continued contribution beyond anecdotal references and imagined assistance in wishful ways.

The second reconception and misrepresentation of Kwanzaa poses a more serious problem. For it seeks to interrupt Kwanzaa's continuing expansion, undermine its acceptance, and question and deny the right of Black people to celebrate themselves, embrace their own culture and have their own holiday without needing to explain away themselves or deny the special and particular meaning the holiday holds for them. And the criticism is posed in racial and religious terms to appeal to emotion and render reason almost irrelevant.

The issues of race and racism are raised around the strange and confused contention that Kwanzaa is too

DR. MAULANA KARENGA

Black and we are being too Black by insisting on its Africanness, its Blackness and its particular meaning for Black people. Moreover, it is asserted that Kwanzaa and Black people must be less Black, if we are to be accepted and acceptable in the dominant society.

Now, it should be noted that there is no public parallel conversation like this for others; no calls for Jews or Hanukkah to be less Jewish, or for the Irish and St. Patrick's Day to be less Irish. Indeed, no other people are criticized for being too much of themselves or called separatist for having and celebrating a holiday that has a special and particular message and meaning for them, regardless of its meaning to

Yet there is among some a racial uncomfort about Blackness and Kwanzaa and thus, attempts to discredit it or redefine it to make it socially "acceptable" like with Nana King and Nana Malcolm. One such attempt is to redefine and re-present Kwanzaa and them as universal and not particular to Africans, as if we can't be both. Indeed, Kwanzaa is culturally particular, but its essential message is both culturally particular and universal in the human sense of the word. To say that it is culturally particular is to say that it is culturally rooted, rises out of a particular people's history and culture, bears the imprint and content of that people's ideas and values, and speaks to the people in a special and particularly meaningful way.

Therefore, Cinco de Mayo speaks to Mexicans in a particularly meaningful way; Chinese New Year to Chinese; Hanukkah to Jews; and St. Patrick's Day to the Irish. And no one asks these cultural groups to redefine their holidays to de-emphasize their origins, make them less Mexican, Chinese, Jewish or Irish or redefine them so that they lose their particular historical and cultural meaning. And likewise, no one should ask that Kwanzaa be redefined and adulterated in such ways.

Kwanzaa is, of necessity, an African American and pan-African holiday and requires no permission or external acceptance for its practice, profound meaning, or worth. Nor can it deny its special and particular meaning to African people without undermining its essential message and meaning as a celebration of African family, community and culture and a unique contribution to the diverse richness of human life and culture. And because Kwanzaa builds on the best of African culture, its message, like all ethically-expansive and worldencompassing messages, has both a particular and universal meaning. It speaks first and foremost to us, originates from us and is an expression of the special cultural truth we speak to the world. And in this, it speaks not only to the best of what it means to be African, but also the best of what it means to be human and thus offers a commonground message to other humans in the world.

Therefore, religious resistance to Kwanzaa is also misplaced and is provoked and promoted by manipulation of uninformed apprehension and misunderstanding. There is no Kwanzaa competition or conflict with the various religions Black people embrace, for as we've said for years, Kwanzaa is a cultural holiday not a religious one. Kwanzaa builds on the best of African tradition and opens up cultural space for Africans of all

And thus, Africans of all faiths can and do celebrate Kwanzaa: Black Christians, Muslims, Hebrews, Jews, Buddhists, Bahá'í, and Hindus, as well as those who follow the ancient African spiritual and ethical traditions of Maat, Ifa, Ashanti, Dogon, etc. For what Kwanzaa offers is not an alternative to their particular religions or faiths, but a common ground of African culture which they all share and on which they meet and are reaffirmed in the expansive meaning and sacred beauty of their being African in the world.

Thus, all over the world, African people rightfully celebrate Kwanzaa, embrace and find common ground in its cultural and ethical values, in its insistence on the oneness and sacredness of life, social justice, due respect of persons and people, responsibility and care for the vulnerable, repair and preservation of the environment, the end of oppression everywhere, a just peace, and the shared obligation to constantly bring and sustain good in the world through righteous and relentless struggle.

What the Devil Meant for Evil; Black People, Let's Make it Good

Like many of you, after the election I had to recalibrate my thinking about politics, politicians, people, how and where I receive information moving forward, as well as adjust my attitude about life moving forward.

For more years than I care to mention I looked forward to and enjoyed watching all the different media outlets — CNN, MSNBC, Meet the Press, Face the Nation and I even appreciated checking out some social media outlets as well as FOX News. I can hear you now, Tony Wafford, why in the hell would you be watching FOX News?

It's simple, I believe a broke watch is right at least twice a day and in the spirit of total transparency, I really enjoy watching White people savage one another, I find White on White crime to be very entertaining.

I liked watching all those outlets because I wanted to find out what was going on in the world. Well after this past election and seeing how everyone of those so-called media experts got it absolutely wrong, I decided that we (the Black community) should become our own investigative reporters. Hell, we can get it just as wrong as they did, and at least we could do a better job of explaining how we came to our own conclu-

Like many of you, I'm guilty of listening with my heart and not always with my head. Well guess what, it's time that we once again start listening with our heads and not ignore what we see with our eyes. What did Maya Angelo say? "When someone shows you who they are, believe them." I see you America.

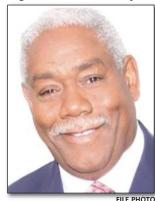

Since the Tangerine Queen became the president-elect, all I'm hearing is conversations around Black unity and how we as a people are going to need to come together to fight these devils for the next four years. I've seen us (Black people) smiling at one another more in public spaces, brothers giving one another the proverbial Black man head nod when we see each other in public.

I was at the grocery store the other day and as I was checking out, there was another young brother in the self-checkout line, and it seemed like the young lady overseeing the self-checkout in a low-key way summoned the security guard over to help her watch this young brother with dreadlocks who was scanning his groceries. The security guard slowly moseyed his way over and looked at the young brother as he scanned his groceries. I turned around to watch the guard as he posted up to watch the young brother. Well, you know me, I couldn't hold it back. I said to the security guard, "Hey what's going on, I usually see you hang out near the front door, is something going on that I should know about?"

He started joking around with me playing it off as if he wasn't really over there to watch the young brother. He said, "Oh I always just walk around," and he started to talk about what I was buying, which was a poor attempt to play off what he was really doing. He knew where I was going with my conversation, so he played it off more and started joking around with me.

So, I just came out and asked, "Were you coming over here to check out my brother over there?" Mind you, the young man never heard what was going on, just the security guard, the young lady ringing up my groceries and the young lady who had beckoned him over in the first place.

He said, "No, I was just walking." That's when I said, "Oh good, because I was beginning to feel some kind of way because you're only looking at my brother and none of those White folks over there scanning their groceries." He said, "Oh no," and walked back towards the front of the store.

So where am I going with all of this? This past election has only made me more cognizant, conscious, and aware of my obligation to love and support my people. Please don't get me wrong. I truly believe in brotherhood of man, but like brother Malcolm X once said, "I believe in the brotherhood of all men, but I don't believe in wasting brotherhood on anyone who doesn't want to practice it with me. Brotherhood is a two-way street."

Let's use these next four years to practice Black brotherhood and sisterhood. Let's look out for and look towards one another for love and support. We've fought bigger devils than these clowns we're about to see on Monday, January 20, 2025.

I have faith in us, and as Rev. Martin Luther King Jr once said, "Faith is taking the first step even when you don't see the whole staircase." Black people let's get to stepping...

What is it About the Holidays?

The word "holiday" originates from an old English term meaning "holy day." Over the years, however, much of the holiness has been lost, and holidays have become more secular.

As different holidays were established throughout history, many of them were not particularly religious or holy but were recognized as public or national special days. The important point is that it became customary to pause and observe these special days in our own way.

Unfortunately, putting all holidays into the same category has caused many of them to lose their distinctiveness. I believe it's crucial that we preserve the meaning of our religious holidays and keep them holy as we celebrate.

Holidays often bring up a mix of emotions for people — some good and some not so good. For me, the holidays remind me of the happy days spent at my grandmother's house where the whole family would gather. For a moment, we could laugh, sing, eat delicious food, and enjoy each other's company.

My grandmother had nine children and many grandchildren, and we would travel from near and far to show gratitude for the blessings God bestowed on us throughout the year. If anyone in the family was struggling, we would come together to help them overcome their difficulties.

What is it about the holidays that causes us to let our guards down and show kindness to one another, while for the rest of the year, we often build walls that block the same attitude of grace?

There are many reasons why our spirits seem to change during the holidays. For one, many people become nostalgic. As I mentioned, we tend to focus more on the positive than the negative.

Sometimes, I think we even have selective memory about how things used to be. Certain songs or movies can make us feel more festive, and traditions help knit us together in a way like nothing else can.

During this season, we often feel more generous and sympathetic. It's similar to how after a tragedy hits a community, people instinctively come together to help. If we could carry this spirit of unity throughout the entire year, it would be a beautiful thing.

Love and kindness can be contagious if we are willing to let them into our hearts. I believe it is a mindset we must choose to adopt as a way of life. Are you willing?

As our family continues to grow, with children marrving and having children. I hope to establish positive memories and traditions for them — memories they will cherish and, hopefully, continue when they are no longer under my roof.

But beyond simply enjoying the holiday festivities, I hope they grow into kind, thoughtful people who remember what they believe in and care for others, even when they are different from themselves. If we want hope for future generations, we must put down hatred, mean-spiritedness, and judgment.

C-2

This holiday season, hold onto what is true in your heart and spread good cheer to those around you. After our family gathers to give thanks for the birth of Christ — and perhaps a new grandchild — and enioys a hearty meal, we'll likely settle in to watch one of our favorite holiday movies, laughing, snuggling, and building new memories.

"Who Is This?"

Ahiah Ashur High (I AM WHO I AM). It's the sixth day before Passover, the final six days before the crucifixion of Jesus. As he approaches Jerusalem from Jericho, the crowds are in a state of wonderment. Many have heard of him and the miraculous works he performed, but now they are seeing him in person.

As he rides into the city, the people ask, "Who is this?" The disciples had prepared for his entry by placing their outer garments on the colt — acting as a saddle — and the procession began. Those who walked before him and followed behind started chanting the Hallel Psalms (Psalms 113-118), songs of praise and thanksgiving used during the Passover celebration. These ancient hymns were sung by pilgrims ascending Jerusalem, acknowledging God's power and deliver-

The crowds were in awe, unsure of who this man truly was. They had heard of His miracles: healing the blind, walking on water, feeding the five thousand, and performing other signs and wonders. The city itself seemed to tremble under the weight of anticipation.

As he entered, the disciples and children began shouting, believing he was coming to deliver them from the Roman authorities. They saw him as a king, but not the kind of king they expected. His glory was evident to some, but His true mission was still unclear to many.

"Who is this?" they asked again. Little did they know that He was entering Jerusalem not as a political liberator, but as the sacrificial lamb whose crucifixion was soon to unfold. He had already foretold his death to his disciples, and even on the Mount of Transfiguration, Moses and Elijah had appeared to comfort him about the coming suffering. Yet many still did not understand what was happening. An ancient prophecy was being fulfilled before their eyes, but most were blinded to it.

The story of his birth had been foretold long before. Astrologers had searched the heavens for his star, and angels had proclaimed his arrival with joy. The wise men had followed that star to Bethlehem, where they found him lying in a manger, worshiping the newborn king. Now, years later, he was returning to Jerusalem as the King of Glory, but in a way no one expected.

Today, we ask, "Who is this?" Some have come to know Him, while others still wonder. Can we understand his full identity? He is equal to the Father, surpassing all human understanding. He is the Creator, equal in nature and essence with God, for he only did what he saw the Father do.

His power is immeasurable — he healed the blind, raised the dead, and even walked on water, defying the laws of nature. He is the God-Man, fully human and fully divine. He knew the hearts of people, saw through their thoughts, and discerned their deepest secrets. His abilities are beyond human comprehension.

What more can be said about him? His greatness and knowledge are limitless. He cannot be contained or fully understood by the finite mind. He is worthy of our worship and praise, for he is the image of the Father, the Creator who has no equal.

He took the scroll from the right hand of the Father and opened the seals, revealing that he alone was worthy to fulfill God's divine plan for redemption. Through his life, death, and resurrection, he has shown us the way to salvation. Thanks for reading!

Congregational Church of Christian Fellowship Launches Fundraiser After Devastating Fire

NEWS and CLASSIFIED

STAFF REPORT

An arson fire recently damaged the Congregational Church of Christian Fellowship located in the West Adams district of Los Angeles.

As part of the rebuildcampaign, Pastor James McKnight issued the following communication welcoming the community to assist in the effort.

"Our beloved Congregational Church of Christian Fellowship ("Christian Fellowship") has suffered devastating damage from an arson fire. While the flames and vandalism have scarred our walls, the spirit of our congregation remains unshaken.

"Now, more than ever, we are steadfast in our mission to: Honor God, Develop Christians, Connect People, and Love Everybody. Today, we humbly turn to you—our cherished friends, supporters, and extended community—for help in restoring this sacred space.

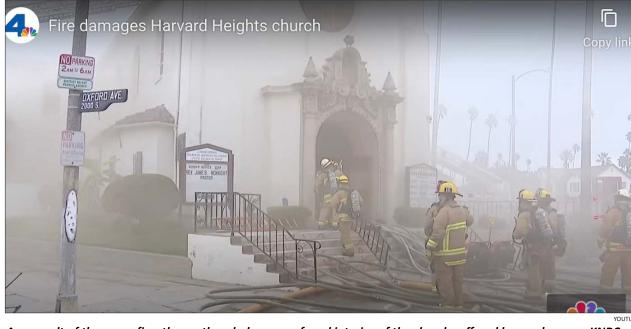

generations,

Pastor James K. McKnight

Christian Fellowship has been more than a building. It has stood as a cornerstone of love, unity, and service—a place where people come together to celebrate life's milestones, seek comfort during hardship, and serve others in need. From weddings and baptisms to food drives and youth outreach, our church has touched countless lives and brought light to our community.

"The fire has left us with significant damage to the narthex, balcony, roof, and interior spaces. We have also experienced the heartbreaking loss of cherished artifacts and structural integrity. As a church located within a Historic Preservation Overlay Zone (HPOZ), the costs of restoration will be substantial. While insurance will cover part of the expense, it falls far short of what is needed to restore Christian Fellowship to its full glory.

As a result of the arson fire, the narthex, balcony, roof, and interior of the church suffered heavy damage. KNBC reported that 60 firefighters were called to the scene. CCCF is located 2085 S. Hobart Blvd. in Los Angeles.

"This church has always been more than ours-it belongs to the entire community. It is a beacon of hope, faith, and love, welcoming all who walk through its doors. Now, we need your help to ensure that this sacred space continues to stand as a source of inspiration and strength for generations to come.

'We understand these are challenging times, but contribution—no every matter the size—makes a difference. Your generosity will bring us one step closer to rebuilding and reopening our doors.

"Please join us in this mission to restore and renew Christian Fellowship. Together, we can rise from the ashes and ensure this sanctuary remains a pillar of unity and faith.

"Thank you for your kindness, prayers, and support. May God bless you abundantly for your generosity."

City Council Welcomes Newly Elected Councilmembers

SENTINEL NEWS SERVICE

The L.A. City Council welcomed two new members, Ysabel Jurado and Adrin Nazarian, on Dec. 10, who will represent the 14th and 2nd Council Districts, respectively.

For the first time in L.A.'s history, the council is made up of a majority of women, reflecting the city's demographics. The city clerk has sworn in all new and reelected members.

Council President Mar-Harris-Dawson

said, "Today marks a new chapter for the Council. I am inspired by the energy and commitment of our new and returning members, and I am confident that we will achieve great things together."

He emphasized the urgency of their mission, saying, "We face pressing challenges — ensuring our unhoused neighbors find shelter, helping residents remain in their homes, and preparing to host world events in our city. By working together, we can drive this important work forward." Councilmember Jurado stated "I'm truly grateful for the confidence the residents of District 14 have shown in me. As I begin this important work, I'm focused on delivering on the promises I made during my campaign."

"I'm humbled by the trust my neighbors and residents of Council District 2 have placed in me and I'm excited to get to work addressing their needs," said Councilmember Nazarian.

The City Council will continue to scale up the best solutions for citywide issues, including homelessness, housing, public safety, and the budget while advocating for resources and services for each constituent.

Pre-Qualification Opportunity with LACCD NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Los Angeles Community College District ("District") invites Reality ("District") invites Reality
Capture firms to submit Statements of Qualification

(SOQ) for the following: Request for Qualifications (RFQ) for District Wide, Reality Capture Services, Multiple Award Task Order

Contract (MATOC).
This procurement process will take place in two steps: the instant Request for Qualifications step ("RFQ") (i.e., pre-qualification); and a subsequent Request for Task Order Proposal step ("RFTOP"). Upon receipt and evaluation of the Statements of Qualifications ("SOQ's") submitted in response to this RFQ, the SQQ's will be scored and evaluated using the District's Uniform System of Rating, and the Qualified Applicants will be identified. A qualified firm will enter into a Multiple Award Task Order Contract. Thereafter, District will publish and issue a Request for Proposal only to the Firms who have prequalified. Only Pre-Qualified Firms will be permitted to submit a proposal.
All Statement of Qualifications

Tamberla Perry on 'Brilliant Minds,' Mental Health, and Her Unconventional Journey to Acting

By Keith L. Underwood Entertainment Writer

Tamberla Perry has made her mark on television with her portraval of Dr. Carol Pierce, chief of Psychiatry, on NBC's "Brilliant Minds."

The series, which explores mental health through the lens of a hospital psychiatry department,

"Brilliant Minds" Episode 107 features Perry in "The Man from Grozny.'

"Our show is all about mental health and the brain," she said, adding, "We're dealing with this all while managing our own mental health."

For Perry, taking on the role of a psychiatrist was both challenging and enlightening. She revealed that she had never undergone therapy herself, but the show changed her perspec-

"It's not so much that it was a taboo thing," she said. "It's more so of a, I didn't think I needed it type thing."

Through this role, Perry began to recognize the value of therapy not only for individuals but for relationships as well.

"I've been married for 13 years," she shared. "And I think all relationships need some type of therapy. Aside from your relationship, you need individual therapy because there are things you're carrying that you don't even realize."

Perry said the experience has motivated her to pursue therapy after the show wraps. "I think the art of this show has awakened in me that there is a great need for it," she explained. "It shouldn't be taboo... it shouldn't be a you thing... it should be a us thing."

The role also highlighted for Perry the contrast between handling situations with logic versus emotion.

"Tamberla is a very logic-based person," she said of herself. In contrast, "Carol Pierce is a very emotional-based person, and certain situations call for different ways to handle those things."

Tamberla Perry as Dr. Carol Pierce on "Brilliant Minds" Episode 110.

Perry's journey to acting wasn't straightforward. She studied Health and Society at the University of Rochester, preparing for a career in medicine.

"The plan was to go to DPT school," she recalled, describing her years as an athletic trainer. "I was wrapping up ankles, on the field with sports teams... that's what I had the passion for."

Perry's pivot to acting came unexpectedly during her corporate job.

"I was sitting at my desk, and I thought, do I want to be in school and do it?" she said. "I remembered I took an acting class my senior year that I didn't do well in-it was a hardfought C-but I said, maybe I could try that again."

Perry launched her acting career in Chicago's theater scene, performing with Steppenwolf Theatre and Second City. She described theater as her "first love" and credited it with shaping her craft.

"If I had the time, I'd love to travel regionally to do Broadway, but it's hard with kids," she said.

Television, however, brought new opportunities. Perry has appeared in "Boss," "APB," "The Good Fight," and "They Cloned Tyrone." On "Brilliant Minds," she praised the strong rapport among the cast, including her co-star Zachary Quinto, who plays neurologist Dr. Oliver

"It was immediate, fast friends," she said, describing how the cast quickly bonded during filming.

Perry said meeting Quinto for the first time was during a Zoom audition, which added to the

"You've got 30 seconds to make some chemistry over Zoom," she joked. "But it was there, and when we finally met in Canada, we sat into it like we had been together for 20 years."

Perry also expressed joy about working with Ashleigh LaThrop, a fellow Chicagoan and longtime friend.

"It was such a true treat to be on the show with her." she said. "We've known each other for years, so it felt really special."

The series has resonated with Perry because of its unique focus on mental health.

"There's nothing like it right now," she said, explaining how the show balances medical cases with the personal struggles of its characters. "It's about exploring the last great frontier—the human mind." The storyline has also prompted Perry to reflect on her personal mental health journey.

"It showed me there's a great need for therapy," she said. "Even if you don't feel like you need it right now, there are things you're carrying that you don't even realize."

Perry encouraged viewers to tune into "Brilliant Minds," which airs Mondays at 7 p.m. PST on NBC and streams on Peacock. She teased a major development in the fall finale.

"It's the perfect cliffhanger to leave you on until January," she said, promising big storylines ahead.

While Perry has found success on television, she remains connected to her theater roots. She acknowledged that balancing theater and TV work is difficult due to time constraints and family commitments.

"Theater feeds the soul," she said, "but TV feeds the pocketbook."

Perry reflected on her transition from aspiring medical professional to actor as a leap of faith.

"It's not a path I recommend to people," she said, noting her lack of formal training, "but it's how I did it." That leap, she said, has shaped a career that allows her to tell meaningful sto-

Deborah Cox Shines In 'Sidelined The QB and Me'

By Zon D'Amour Contributing Writer

In her latest film, "Sidelined: The QB and Me," legendary singer and actress Deborah Cox plays a high school dance instructor named Miss Alicia. She helps to guide and inspire one of her most gifted students named Dallas (actress Siena Agudong) by encour-ing to audition for a highly competitive performance arts school which is the alma mater of her late mother.

At the same time, Dallas' boyfriend Drayton (actor Noah Beck) is a star football player under immense pressure from his father, Leroy Lahey (actor James David Van Der Beek) to continue the family legacy by attending his alma mater. Drayton, however, would like to forge his own path by attending college on the West Coast, closer to Dallas so that their budding relationship doesn't have to end.

Adapted from the popular book, "The QB Bad Boy and Me" by Tay Marley, the teens are torn between whether or not to follow their heart or follow tradition in the coming-of-age film.

Renowned for her multiplatinum hit songs including, "Nobody Supposed To Be Here" and "We Can't Be Friends" in addition to her Grammy nominated role as "Glinda" in "The Wiz" on Broadway, Deborah Cox told the Sentinel what inspired her to accept this role.

"I loved everything about the script. I loved everything about the casting and the director, Justin Wu, it was all good things. When I read the script and saw how complex the characters were and the layers of storytelling, it's a warm, charming, feelgood romantic drama about two people who have a deep love for each other, a deep love for their craft, and they're trying to figure it out," she said.

Cox added, "It's fun to play a mentor that motivates and inspires because it's very close to who I already am. And it was great to play off these two characters that had so much chemistry it was just jumping off the screen."

differentiates What "Sidelined: The QB and Me" from other films set in high school with an athlete and cheerleader at the center is its emphasis on the characters' understanding that they're young adults capable of making their own decisions about their future.

"You have choices" is a recurring theme that will remind audiences to believe in themselves.

For Justin Wu, a renowned photographer and award-winning television director, "Sidelined: The QB & Me" marks his feature film debut. When asked about centering the arc of the film around the high school love story, Wu shared, "It's a truly universal story about chasing one's dreams. The dance part is very similar to filmmaking.

"You have this character who's chasing after her dreams by going to her late mother's alma mater, which is very similar to me. My mother was an artist, and I also wanted to follow in her footsteps when I was growing up," he recalled.

"And the fact that I'm actually doing what I'm doing today is rewarding, but I also remember all the challenges that I had to face to get to this point. So, I think that journey is one that I really connected to. As for football, it's no different from any other artist [in regard to] resilience, persistence, discipline, and even the idea of legacy, Wu said. "So, I find that, when you think of football and dance, the way I approach it as a filmmaker is to look at it like a metaphor. What does this represent and how is it best translated? As a visual artist myself, watching football, watching a lot of dances, working with all these different athletes and artists has been in my DNA for quite some time," admitted Wu.

When asked about casting Deborah Cox for the role of Miss Alicia. Wu said. "I grew up listening to her music, it's really transformed my life and made me understand life a bit better.

Having the opportunity to

Awards allowed me to really understand who she is and what she's all about. "She's at a certain age

meet her after the Juno

now where she's a mother and she has so much wisdom to offer from all the years that she's been singing and performing and now a lot of what she does is to give back and uplift the next generation of voices. When I had a chance to meet her, we immediately connected, and I thought of no one else. She was the first and last choice for Miss Alicia."

Zebulon Barnes believes that being a student athlete is being a role model.

BY AMANDA SCURLOCK Sports Editor

Zebulon Barnes received a full scholarship to Lincoln University to play golf. Barnes started playing golf at a young age but took a seven-year hiatus from the sport.

Student Athlete of the Week: Zebulon Barnes

"I started playing tournaments when I was six," Barnes said. "It's been one heck of a journey."

He played several sports, including basketball and soccer, until his father urged him to return to golf.

"We had a hard-time talk and he told me that [basketball players] they started when they were really young," Barnes said.

"We talk a lot about life, everything in general but I appreciate my dad and my mom so much."

On the days that he practices, Barnes wakes up at 5:00A.M. to exercise at a gym and starts practicing at a golf course at 8:00A.M. Barnes takes care of his homework in the evenings and takes time to meditate.

A key aspect of golf is staying focused. Barnes knows what to do when doubts about his gameplay drift in his head.

"I'm always positive but sometimes my mind gets a little negative if I hit a bad shot," he said. "The good tournaments, the one I'm top five or top 10 or I win, my mind is really positive and in the beginning of the round, I'm thinking I already won the tournament."

Being a youth golfer for the Tee Divas and Tee Dudes organization gave him opportunities to excel. Through the organization, Barnes was able to compete on a golf course similar to a PGA course.

"There are a ton of peo-Divas Tee Dudes, a ton of opportunities, a ton of golf tournaments," he said. "I'm super grateful that Tee Divas and Tee Dudes provided me with this opportunity."

Outside earning a scholarship, Barnes enjoyed the campus and his future teammates at Lincoln.

"I really bond with the players and build a really good relationship with each and every one of them," Barnes said. "The coach told me that the players had ple I've met through Tee a good time hanging around with me."

> For Barnes, being a student athlete means being a role model.

> "Sometimes people don't really pay attention to that aspect," he said. "Just being a positive example."

> His favorite class is video editing. He took a class when he was young and another class during his high school years.

> "I took a video editing class during my sophomore year and it was so fun," Barnes said. "I love to do skits with my friends."

WinterFest at Hollywood Park Brought Family Fun

By Amanda Scurlock Sports Editor

Hollywood Park partnered with NBA legend Baron Davis and his Black Santa Brand to host the third annual WinterFest. While WinterFest provided family fun and entertainment, it uplifted local businesses and raised awareness of pickleball.

"Shout out to Hollywood Park for opening their doors to the community," Davis said. "This year, we decided to do pickleball because we feel like from an exercise standpoint and a new sport standpoint, this would be great to introduce to the community."

The WinterFest consisted of several activities from Saturday morning evening. It started with the Farm Habit Farmer's Market that provided produce and goods along with a vac-

Among the several families that attended the WinterFest was two-time Paralympic medalist Isaac Jean-Paul and his family. He earned a silver medal in the men's T13 Long Jump during the 2024 Paris Games.

"My daughter loves Christmas, I heard it's a celebrity pickleball match," Jean-Paul said. "Paris was crazy ... This is my second time being a Paralympian. My first Paralympic Games was in Tokyo and that was night and day from Paris."

Prior to the Pickleball tournament, attendees were able to play exhibition matches. Davis played alongside youth before competing in the tournament. ABC7 Los Angeles reporter Ashley Mackey competed in the tournament with her father.

"Being here in person has been great and lots of good energy," Mackey said. "I am an athlete at heart, whenever I go out win but it's for fun." Members of the Ingle-

'The Shop: Where Culture Shapes Up' Celebrates HBO Series

By Amanda Scurlock Sports Editor

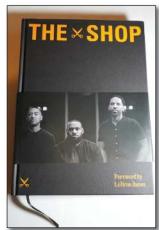

The coffee table book "The Shop: Where Culture Shapes Up" by Ernest Wilkins gives fans a behind-the-scenes look at the HBO hit show while showing key highlights of the series.

NBA all-time leading scorer LeBron James wrote the foreword for the book. Along with vivid photos of the countless public figures who were featured on the show, the book includes an essay about the role of the barbershop in the Black community.

It also includes an oral history of the inception of "The Shop," told by show co-creators Randy Mims and Paul Rivera along with executive producer

Maverick Carter.

Wilkins was sought out to create the book.

AMANDA SCURLOCK/L.A. SENTINEL "The Shop: Where Culture Shapes Up" features shots of celebrities and public figures that have starred on the show "The Shop."

With a journalism background that included writing for Rolling Stone, GQ, and Pitchfork, Wilkins crafted essays throughout the book. The essays touch upon the various walks of life the guest stars come from, touching on topics like politics, music, entrepreneurship, and sports. "This show, to me has always been a fascinating totem of a time that I think we take for granted," Wilkins said. "Before every athlete and their mom had a podcast, "The Shop" was the first time you hear some of these athletes actually talk about things." "The Shop: Where Culture Shapes Up" not only features a variety of candid and posed shots of the guest stars but also quotes from their discussions on the show.

"My writing, I try to keep up with the artwork that they do," Wilkins said. "But my whole point was make it as visual as possible. You want to see this and you want to feel this experience of being this fly on the wall for this conversation."

Wilkins, who is a fan of "The Shop," watched every episode at least six times to compile quotes and complete the book. One book that helped him provide more information about the Black barbershop in America was "Barbershops, Bibles, and B.E.T." by Dr. Melissa Harris-Perry.

"The barbershop culture that they try to create on the show, if you don't understand what that is, it's going to be hard to get the rest of it," Wilkins said.

"To me, it was really important to tell that story, it's the central framework that then is used to be the platform in which we tell the story."

For Wilkins, a highlight of the book is the "Free Game" chapter which is filled with advice.

"This book gives you a lot of stuff disguised as a cool book about celebrities," Wilkins said. "There's a lot in here that's worth paying attention to and will hopefully serve as motivation to somebody else to go do something."
